

Do You Know Who Is Caring For Your Pet?

Credentialed Veterinary Technicians are the unsung heroes of veterinary practices!

What makes them special?

Credentialed Veterinary Technicians are the supercharged equivalent of human nurses. They are graduates of demanding two- or four-year training programs where they learn to care for many different species of animals, from mice to horses and everything in between!

Credentialed Veterinary Technicians are highly trained to provide expert care including the collection of diagnostic specimens, administration of anesthesia, continuous monitoring of the pet during the procedure and recovery, and support throughout any hospitalized patient care.

These professionals are the 'right hand' of veterinarians, supporting them as they diagnose and treat healthy and sick animals.

They have passed a national credentialing examination and commit to lifelong learning through continuing education requirements.

Education is a primary role for credentialed veterinary technicians. They teach pet owners how to keep their beloved pets healthy and support them when pets are sick or injured.

Credentialed Veterinary Technicians are truly heroes, be sure and thank them!

Credentialed Veterinary Technicians are here to help when your pet gets sick or injured, and so is The ASPCA® Pet Health Insurance Program.*
