

Introducing a new dog to your dog family?

Welcoming a new furry canine friend for your dog? These tips can help make the transition less hairy.

Let the dogs meet each other in a neutral territory. First, greet at a distance, then move closer while leashed and supervised.

Keep an eye on body language. Signals of fear or aggression such as a tucked tail, bared teeth or hunched posture can mean you need to move slower.

Let your new dog check out the house without other pets around.

Take breaks when the dogs get too excited, and give your dogs space when needed.

Offer treats to reward calm and relaxed behavior.

Be patient. Accepting a new pack member takes time.

Introducing a new pet often means introducing new expenses. Pet insurance can help you pay for veterinary care to keep your pets happy and healthy. In addition, you may be eligible for a 10% multi-pet discount for each additional pet.*
